FOREWORD

Recent changes in municipal organization, and in particular, the replacement of county governments by regional municipal governments, have created problems and confusion for lawyers, title searchers and others who deal with land.

With few exceptions, the internal territorial division of the Province has been the lifelines of the most currently active. As a result, the situation was very confusing. The situation of regional municipal governments was also very confusing.

THE ONTARIO CONVEYANCER'S DIRECTORY

The major changes began to occur in 1965, with the creation of the LAND REGISTRY AND SHERIFFS' OFFICES. Since then, the situation has been very confusing. The situation of regional municipal governments was also very confusing.

The "Users Liaison Committee" representing the Canadian Bar Association, the Law Society of Upper Canada and the York County Law Association which meets regularly with the Deputy Minister and myself, suggested that we publish a guide reflecting current to former municipalities and the consequential changes in the judicial districts and the registration divisions. Mr. John Dowdell, Legal Counsel with the Property Law Branch of the Property Rights Division, undertook the task and this publication is the result.

Recent changes in municipal organization, and in particular, the replacement of county governments by regional municipal governments, have created problems and confusion for lawyers, title searchers and others who deal with land.

With few exceptions, the internal territorial division of the Province has remained static during the lifetimes of most currently active legal practitioners. As a result, the situation was reasonably familiar and the recent creation of regional municipal governments has seemed all the more drastic.

The major changes began to occur in 1968, with the creation of the first regional municipality, Ottawa-Carleton. Since then, eleven regional and district municipalities have been created.

The "Users Liaison Committee" representing the Canadian Bar Association, the Law Society of Upper Canada and the York County Law Association which meets regularly with the Deputy Minister and myself, suggested that we publish a guide relating current to former municipalities, and the consequential changes in the judicial districts and land registration divisions. Mr. John Dowdell, Legal Research Officer with the Property Law Branch of the Property Rights Division, undertook the task and this publication is the result of his efforts.
